

Risk Warning

Aximora, the operator of this website, provides services related to trading Contracts for Difference (CFDs) and the Forex market. Trading CFDs involves a high level of risk and may result in significant financial losses. This type of investment is not suitable for everyone, as there is a possibility of losing the entire invested capital. In unfavorable market conditions, such a loss may occur within a short period of time.

This risk warning does not cover all potential factors that may affect trading and investing using the Company's products and services. Its purpose is to inform clients about the potential trading and non-trading risks associated with investing in highly volatile assets and using the Company's services. If the Client finds these risks unacceptable, it is recommended to immediately cease using the Company's services.

Use of Margin and Leverage

To open a CFD position, the Client must maintain an adequate level of margin. Typically, the margin represents only a portion of the total contract value, allowing for trading with borrowed funds (leverage). Even minor market movements can significantly impact the value of the Client's positions. These changes may lead to either profits or losses.

The Client is responsible for continuously monitoring capital, profits and losses, and maintaining minimum margin requirements. In the event of unfavorable market conditions or an increase in margin requirements, the Company reserves the right to close one or more of the Client's positions if the required funds are not maintained. Losses resulting from such actions are the responsibility of the Client.

Since leverage magnifies both potential profits and potential losses, the Client must closely monitor all open positions and be prepared to act promptly.

Technical Risks

When using an electronic trading platform, the Client may encounter technical failures, including issues with hardware, software, servers, internet connection, or other communication channels. These disruptions may affect order execution: cause delays, lead to execution at a different price, or prevent execution altogether.

The Company is not responsible for technical failures unless they are caused by its gross negligence or intentional misconduct. However, the Company takes all reasonable measures to ensure the stable and secure operation of its systems.

The Client acknowledges that cyberattacks on the Company's systems may disrupt services and result in financial losses. The Company bears no responsibility for the consequences of such attacks, provided that all reasonable security measures have been implemented.

Legal and Tax Obligations

The Client bears sole responsibility for complying with the laws of their country regarding financial operations. This includes the obligation to notify government authorities of trading activity, properly declare income, and pay taxes in a timely manner, if required by law.

Force Majeure Circumstances

The Company shall not be held liable for losses or the inability to withdraw funds resulting from force majeure circumstances. Such situations include natural disasters, extreme weather conditions, military conflicts, terrorist acts, mass unrest, revolutions, as well as actions by government authorities or third parties that affect the functioning of the markets.

Additional Provisions and Risks

If the Client intends to grant trading authority over their account to a third party, they understand and agree to fulfill additional conditions. This includes submitting a written request, obtaining the Company's approval, and entering into the appropriate agreement. The Company bears no responsibility for the Client's choice of third party, their actions, or any losses resulting from such delegation. Furthermore, the Company reserves the right to reject or revoke the appointment of a third party at any time without prior notice.

The Company offers different types of accounts. The Client acknowledges that each account type may be subject to different obligations, risks, and requirements depending on financial conditions.

Particular risks are associated with trading CFDs on cryptocurrencies. These assets are highly volatile and unpredictable, which may lead to a rapid and complete loss of invested capital. The Company informs the Client of these risks, and the Client confirms their understanding and willingness to take such risks into account when making investment decisions.

On certain regulated stock markets, opening a short position may be restricted or impossible. In the event of restrictions on short selling, the Company may not offer the corresponding CFD or may charge an additional fee for such a position. The Client will be informed in advance of such charges whenever possible.

Clients of Aximora are required to acknowledge and accept all of the above-mentioned risks associated with trading CFDs and using the Company's services. Trading with leverage, volatile instruments, and electronic platforms requires a high degree of awareness and responsibility.

